Rose football steamrolling toward Day in the Dome

by Andrew Nuxoll
Thorn Reporter

On October 29, 1994 Rose-Hulman's football team will be participating in the 1994 ICAC Day in the Dome. Eight collegiate football teams, which include all seven Indiana Collegiate Athletic Conference teams and Mt. St. Joseph, will compete in four separate games all day in Indianapolis's RCA Dome.

Rose-Hulman's head football coach Scott Duncan remembers how excited the team was during the last Day in the Dome in 1990. "It was like Dorothy seeing the Land of Oz. There was a lot of electricity and excitement in the bus." Duncan stated that unlike most college games, instead of having to get the team keyed-up, he had to control their jitters.

Apparently he succeeded. During the first quarter of that game, Rose-Hulman scored on their first three possessions. At the time Rose-Hulman was close to leading the conference and the team needed a win. Win they did. The final score against Taylor University was 42-7.

This year the circumstances are remarkably similar. With a 5-1 overall record and a 3-0 record in ICAC, Rose-Hulman is poised to take the lead in the ICAC conference. The other two undefeated ICAC teams, Wabash College and Hanover College, will play each other this weekend. Because Rose-Hulman will be playing Hanover College in the RCA Dome next weekend, the outcome of this week's game is critical.

This week, coach Duncan and his team have been concentrating on their battle with Franklin College, which is a must win. Fortunately, both the coach and his players seem confident in victory. Last year, Rose-

Hulman's loss to Franklin College marked the beginning of a disappointing losing streak that lasted until the end of the season. This year they plan to "blow the doors off" early in the game. "We've got to play hard and not play at their level," says cornerback Jerome Williams. "We've got to steamroll everybody [this year]."

This year the team has what coach Duncan describes as a "very disciplined offense" that has made very few mistakes. "We knew the offense would be effective [this year], but we had know idea that it would be so good." Most of this success is occurring on the ground. With an average of over 300 yards rushing per game, Rose-Hulman is ranked fourth in the NCAA division III.

Catalan troubadours serenade with medieval song and rhyme

It's different, it's rare and it's exquisite. Music from the medieval era will be featured by the Bloomington-based group, Altramar, during a presentation Sunday, October 23, in Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology's Moench Hall Auditorium.

The show is titled "Iberian Gardens" and will include music from Muslim, Jewish and Christian Spain. Specifically, the group will perform music from the Cantigas de Santa Maria, Hispano-Arabic song poetry, Catalan troubadour songs, the "Song of the Sybil," selections from "Tales of El Cid" and Hebrew poetry and songs.

Altramar is a five-member group that is an ensemble-in-residence at Trinity Episcopal Church in Bloomington. Members include Angela Mariani, who produces a weekly early music program on WFIU-FM; Jann Cosart, who plays bowed string instruments; Chris Smith, a jazz guitarist; and vocalists David Stattelmann and Allison Zelles.

The concert is being sponsored by the Elsie Pawley Fund and organized by the European studies division of Rose-Hulman's Humanities Social and Life Sciences Department. The free concert begins at 4 p.m.

Christmas spirits in Indianapolis not hampered by summer temperatures

by David Hile
Thorn Reporter

It's beginning to look a lot like...well, fall; which means that Christmas is only a season away. To get eggnog in your blood, the city of Indianapolis is now promoting the special events it will be showcasing throughout the holiday season.

The kick-off of the Christmas season will be marked by the lighting of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument as it is transformed into "The World's Largest Christmas Tree." The tree is decked with 4,638 multi-colored lights on 52 strands of steel cable, each 242 feet long. The ceremonial flip of the switch will be accompanied by a 1,000 voice choir, various local celebrities, and an estimated 75,000 spectators. The lighting will be held on Nov. 25 at Monument Circle in downtown Indianapolis.

Professional tuba players will toot their holiday spirits through their production of TUBASANTAS. Tuba players perform holiday melodies dressed as Santa Claus for the benefit of the American Lung Association's Super Kids Camp. The 14th annual concert will be held in the Indiana Roof Ballroom on Nov. 25. For information contact the American Lung Association of Indiana at (317) 573-3900.

The Indianapolis Ballet Theatre will perform the perennial holiday favorite "The Nutcracker" from Nov. 25-27. A live orchestra will join the ballet troupe at the Murat Theatre for Tchaikovsky's full-length ballet. December 22-24 shows will be held at the Warren Performing Arts Center. More information can be obtained by contacting (317) 635-2433.

What could be more Christmas in Indiana than basketball? The RCA Dome will host the Indiana Hoosiers against the Evansville Purple Aces on Dec. 3. For tickets call (317) 262-3452. Purdue will be holding a doubleheader in Market Square Arena as the men's team squares off against New Orleans followed by a women's clash, Purdue vs. DePaul. The games will be held on Dec. 17. Indiana will return to Indy on Dec. 28-29 for the annual Hoosier Classic at Market Square Arena. Four games will be held overall featuring the Hoosiers, Arkansas Little Rock, Pepperdine, and Eastern Kentucky. Tickets for the Hoosier Classic and Purdue games at Market Square Arena can be obtained by calling (317) 639-2112.

The 26th annual Christmas at the Zoo will be held from Dec. 1-23 and Dec. 26-30. More than 100 animated characters and picturesque scenes will be decked in lights throughout zoo grounds, highlighted by a Victorian Village, Yuletide carriages, 16-foot high starburst, and larger-than-life toy soldiers. Additional exhibits include a special holiday dolphin show and train, camel, pony, and trolley rides.

Indianapolis offers job-seeking grads abundant opportunities

(College Press Service) NEW YORK--Want a job after graduation? Then check out Salt Lake City, Utah; Madison, Wis.; or Sioux Falls, S.D. These cities rank number one on the respective lists for best large, medium and small markets in which to start a career, according to the college edition of "National Business Employment Weekly."

"We based our findings on a number of different criteria, including projected employment growth, general economic trends and the cost of living, giving attention to factors such as low rent, low taxes and low insurance," said "National Business Employment Weekly" editor Tony Lee. While many college grads dream of making it big in cities such as New York and Los Angeles, these metropolitan areas may not be the best places to launch a career, said Lee. "These cities are very expensive and employment growth wasn't that great," he said. "In fact, both cities actually experienced a net loss in jobs last year."

Large cities, defined as having more than 500,000 jobs in the local economy, that ranked in the top five are Salt Lake City; Indianapolis; Nashville, Tenn.; Louisville, Ky.; and Greensboro/Winston-Salem, N.C. Major metropolitan areas such as Phoenix, Minneapolis and Atlanta also made the top 10 list. The top five cities in medium markets--with 150,000 to 500,000 jobs--included Madison; Austin, Texas; Lake County, Ill.; Raleigh/Durham, N.C.; and Omaha, Neb. Small-cities included Sioux Falls; Provo, Utah; Boise, Idaho; Santa Fe, N.M.; and Rapid City, S.D.

Club budgets carved from limited source

by Timothy A. Boyd,
SGA Publicity Director

In the past few weeks, the Student Government Association has received many questions concerning club budgets for the 1994-1995 school year. To clear up any confusion, budget information for SGA funded clubs has been made available.

At the end of each school year, all SGA funded clubs submit to the SGA Finance Committee a budget proposal (see TOTAL column in adjoining table) for the next school year. The finance committee then reviews each proposal, item by item, to determine how much funding each club should be allotted (see ALLOTMENT column.). Because the SGA receives their funding through student activities fees, there is a limited amount of money to be divided up between all of the SGA funded clubs. For this reason, some items must be cut from the budgets. The finance committee brings their recommendation to the student senate to be voted on, possibly amended, and hopefully passed.

The following table lists the budgets for each club for the 1994-1995

After a rocky start, Rose-Hulman's defense is showing steady improvement. Duncan is especially proud of the defense's performance during Rose-Hulman's Homecoming game against Anderson University. "When the job needs to be done, it gets done." During that game, Rose-Hulman's defense scored a shutout with Anderson's only touchdown coming from a blocked punt.

Finally, some of the team's success can also be attributed to the fact that it is so well-rounded. "There are no stars [on the team]," says Coach Duncan. Offensively, the ball is being dispersed among several good offensive backs and receivers which makes it difficult for opponents to find a focus for their defense.

Those who are interested in attending the ICAC's Day in the Dome on October 29th can sign up next week for a drawing to win one of 120 raffle tickets. # European magistrates strike back against corruption

WASHINGTON--In Latin Europe this is The Year of the Magistrate: Crusading judges attack politically powerful networks of corruption in Italy and France, with Spain next in line. This idea's time may soon come in America, in different form.

European magistrates are transforming the political and judicial landscapes around them. Their surprising success reflects a deepening disillusionment within electorates that are as fed up with politics as usual as American voters seem to be. But instead of Ross Perot, Europeans are letting the magistrates carry their message of disgust to the Establishment.

That message has been sent most powerfully in Italy, where a revolution has been mounted by the country's magistrates, who combine the powers of grand jury prosecutors and preliminary hearing judges who can order defendants held for trial in the American system.

Last year's crusade against bribery and Mafia connections helped disgrace and sweep away the old politicians and parties that had ruled since World War II. Now the leading anti-corruption magistrate has taken direct aim at Italy's fabulously wealthy businessman-prime minister, Silvio Berlusconi, a Perot-like politician who hopes to silence the troublesome judge.

In France, senior members of Prime Minister Edouard Balladur's Cabinet face indictment for corrupt land deals, while a former Socialist prime minister is likely to face charges soon of "complicity to poisoning" for allegedly tolerating the distribution of AIDS-tainted blood.

And a dozen business leaders--the French equivalents of the presidents of IBM or Coca-Cola--have been hauled into court in Paris and threatened with reputation-ruining investigations of alleged payoffs to political parties and local officials in return for public works contracts.

In the past, these in-

Jim Hoagland
Washington Post
Syndicated Columnist

vestigations would have been dropped or never undertaken against such politically influential targets. Political payoffs and kickbacks have long been the cause of shrugs in Italy, France and Spain. The revolt of the magistrates raises questions: Why now? How far will they go?

Part of the answer involves a clear loss of credibility by the political and economic elites of these countries in the wake of high unemployment and other significant social dislocation. The magistrates sense that the time is right to establish the judiciary as an independent force representing "the people" rather than "the state," once the supreme arbiter of European society.

It is significant that Socialist parties have held power in France and Spain and shared it in Italy for much of the past 15 years. One of the great untold stories of modern Europe is the interconnecting web of corruption woven by and for the ruling parties of the left in France, Italy and Spain in that period. It rivals what the conservatives who preceded them in power did, and proves that corruption resides on both sides of the political spectrum.

Naive hopes by Franco's Six-Pack or Roberto Everyman that political change would bring political honesty have evaporated. The old faith that a well-educated elite would ultimately act in the nation's best interest are now under attack in a newly powerful media. The sense of protection that the elite previously felt is disappearing.

When Antonio Di Pietro, the top anti-corruption cop in Italy, said in a newspaper interview last week that his investigation now went to "the highest levels," Italians immediately understood that he was going after Berlusconi for allegedly having secretly retained control of his television empire after taking office. Berlusconi read it that way as well: He said he would file a complaint against Di Pietro for undermining constitutional authority.

There is an inescapable whiff of Robespierre in this turmoil. Businessmen complain they are at the mercy of poorly paid civil servants following secret political agendas. But if the magistrates make justice, not political change, their primary objective, they stand to be significant and positive agents of modernization in societies not accustomed to fully independent judiciaries.

Wish them well. They are far more serious figures than the "anti-Washington" politicians like Perot and Oliver North who talk trash about America's political "elite" in order to join it, not reform it. To say nothing of a morally corrupt Congress that runs away from campaign finance reform.

America does not have national magistrates, and our corruption takes a different form. But the mood is right for people with serious law enforcement backgrounds to have a serious national political impact. In New York, ex-D.A. Rudy Giuliani, after some early stumbles, is off to a good start as mayor. Keep in mind Louis Freeh, the savvy and articulate head of the FBI.

If the European mood does move across the Atlantic, stay tuned for Gangbusters.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor--

Dear Bruce:

Thanks for your letter to me in last week's issue in which you challenged my handling of the now-famous marijuana case.

Students have every right to question policies, enforcement of policies, or any other actions I may take in any discipline matter. In fact, you are encouraged to do so. I enjoy dialogue.

The one thing I will continue to insist on, however, is that writers consult some factual documents before jumping to conclusions. You refer to the marijuana incident as a "... felony offense." Under Indiana Statute, possession of two ounces or less of marijuana is a Class A Misdemeanor, not a felony. Perhaps in your opinion it should be a felony but, then, I have to deal with "what is" not "what might be". Nowhere in that statute am I required to refer such cases to local law enforcement agencies. It might interest you to know that, had I turned the young men in to authorities as "first time offenders" they would probably have received less harsh punishment than that I applied in this case. My best advice to you in this regard? Read the law. Section 35-48-4-12 of the Indiana Criminal Code under Controlled Substances speaks of "conditional discharge for possession as first offense" which you might find both interesting and informative.

I take great exception to your references to me and my actions in the case as "unethical", and "... an obvious lack of integrity and civic responsibility". You neither know me or my history of actions in such cases well enough to question either my ethics or my integrity. In fact, your reference to me and my actions in those terms causes me to question both your ethics and your integrity!

For your information, what is best for Rose-Hulman is rarely a reference point for me in deliberating such cases. Primary emphasis is always with the student and what might be done to bring about positive change in behavior. The easy solution is to turn that responsibility over to someone else outside the college campus or to simply expel violators. But then, if you're truly interested in the student as a person and, if you're interested in observing change over time, how can you accomplish that by banishing them?

Swarthmore students lukewarm on patriotism

The debate on whether to flying Old Glory is a partisan action

SWARTHMORE, Pa.--The U.S. flag is once again flying over Swarthmore College, and like the original saga of the Stars and Stripes, this unfurling didn't take place without a fight.

Last April, members of the Conservative Union, a new Republican student organization on campus, donated a flag to fly above the Swarthmore administration building. Although the school had an American flag flying atop the athletic fieldhouse, Old Glory had been missing from the center of campus since the 1960s.

After Swarthmore President Al Bloom accepted the Conservative Union's offer, the flag was set to be hoisted above Parrish Hall.

But that was before the protests poured in. The College Democrats objected to the move, saying that the action seemed to imply that the Republicans had a lock on patriotism. The Socialist Political Action Collective said the decision to raise the flag was another example of American imperialism. Some international and minority students objected to the flag itself, saying it symbolized oppression in foreign lands and at home. Finally, some students objected to the flag-raising decision, saying it was not decided on democratically by the student body.

"The whole protest really surprised me," said Geoffrey Cline, president of the Conservative Union. "We figured we were doing something good by donating the flag to our school."

But Ben Stern, a member of Swarthmore's College Democrats, doesn't quite see it that way. The flag donation was part of a week of activities by the Conservative Union, and it really came off as 'their' symbol, not everyone's," Stern said. "We just felt that the flag should be a non-partisan symbol. It's something that shouldn't be so closely associated with the Conservative Union or even the Democrats for that matter. It's a symbol for everyone."

Still, last spring, Bloom decided to put the flag up, which was raised during a ceremony that involved students from all political parties.

But during the summer, someone snagged the flag.

"We had nothing to do with it," said Stern. "I came back to school, and the flag was gone."

And just as the debate began to heat up again this fall, Matthew Schenk, a senior majoring in English, came up with a plan to appease all sides.

"As I was following the protest, I realized that no one was really doing anything about it," said Schenk, a member of the Conservative Union. "Everyone was talking, but nothing was getting done."

Schenk organized a student vote on the question of whether the flag should fly above Parrish Hall. During the last week of September, he set up a table in the campus dining hall and polled students on their opinion. And despite his affiliation with the group that donated the flag, Schenk said he wasn't that concerned with the results.

"I just wanted to see the issue resolved," he said. "It was getting pretty old." With about half the student body participating, the flag won 376 to 239 and went up shortly after.

"I'm glad to see it there," said Schenk. "I sense that there's a real lack of understanding about the good and positive things about this country, and I'm happy to know that there are more people who are proud of this country than those that are ashamed of it."

Stern said he's happy to see the flag flying at the top of Parrish Hall as well, but was more pleased with the way the issue was resolved.

"People are pretty active here at Swarthmore, so I am happy that we had a legitimate discussion about the flag before putting it up," he said. "I'm glad it's there because it shows that the process is more important than the product, and that makes me feel good."

Pom-poms, beer bottles and raw chicken...

Iowa cheerleaders become targets in student "target range"

IOWA CITY, Iowa--Flying raw chicken and beer bottles from the student section at Kinnick stadium has forced University of Iowa cheerleaders to seek a safer place to perform.

There were no injuries during the lowa-Michigan game, but the ongoing problem has caught the eye of those in charge of security at UI football games.

Alcohol is forbidden in the stadium, but evidence of its consumption has caused problems. Last season, projectiles caused two cheerleaders to be injured, said UI cheerleading coach Michele Anderson. Trainers treated both cheerleaders, and they didn't require further medical attention.

"Last year, one of the girls was hit in the face with a can, and I was hit in the face with a broken bottle," Anderson said. "Alcohol is not allowed in the stadium, but they are getting it in somehow."

Cheerleaders were distracted Saturday not only by flying beer bottles but also by marshmallows, hot dogs, nachos and raw chicken during their routines.

"It was like we were in a target range," said UI cheerleader Vu Nguyen. "We had the girls 6 or 7 feet in the air, and it was like, 'See who could get the best shot.' Throwing things has doubled since last year. We don't understand what's going on."

The squad collectively decided to sacrifice the traditional west side cheering area for safety reasons.

"We decided this year to move immediately if things were thrown. It is unsafe," Anderson said. "There is no reason to stand there and risk losing somebody."

To prevent the move from becoming permanent, security will be increased at the games to protect the cheerleaders from the fans.

The university cannot afford to hire additional full-time officers with powers of arrest, so adjustments are being made with the available staff, said Lt. Duane Papke of campus security. Security personnel from other stadium areas will be on call for student crowd control if needed.

"Security will be monitored much more closely in the student section," Papke added. "They will be ready to take appropriate action from the game's start to finish."

Students needing disciplinary action will be ejected from the stadium, and their ticket and student IDs will be confiscated and turned over to UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones.

Seven to 12 IDs are collected each game, which frustrates Jones.

"This is a very serious safety issue. We will not tolerate people throwing things," Jones said. Other disciplinary action can be taken in addition to confiscating the game ticket.

"If someone is hit with a bottle, and they get hurt, that is assault. We will file assault cases. This is dangerous and thoughtless behavior."

UI sophomore Steve Thill attended last week's game and said his sympathies are with the cheerleaders.

"Last year one guy (in the crowd) was a complete idiot," said Thill. "He practically antagonized people into throwing stuff at him. But the cheerleaders are there to cheer for the students and then people ruin it for the rest of the crowd by throwing chickens. If I was a cheerleader, I would fear for my safety on the field."

The UI Department of Public Safety said the football audience should monitor each other.

"When kids throw things, their peers should not condone it," Papke said. "They laugh it off when they should be accepting responsibility to stop it."

Toad the Wet Sprocket and Wild Colonialists slated to rock Hulman Center

Two weeks from now, on November 4, Toad the Wet Sprocket and Wild Colonialists two alternative bands, will be performing in a concert in the ISU Hulman Center, which has a capacity of approximately 2000 persons. Toad the Wet Sprocket has released three separate albums, Pale, Fear, and, their latest, Dulcinea. Songs on their Fear album include All I Want and Walk on the Ocean. Songs on their Dulcinea include Something's Always Wrong and Fall Down.

The opening act, Wild Colonialists, is a group that has held several recent west coast shows, but this is the first time that they have gone on a national tour. Their recently-released album, Fruit of Life, has received rave reviews from various sources. People Magazine said, "Scottish singer Angela McCluskey (the band's lead singer) has a husky voice that's made her a star at L.A.'s hippest nightspots... this singer's multiple talents create a rare commodity--an album that is entertaining from beginning to end." Fashion Magazine called Fruit of Life "one of the most original albums so far this year... all the songs on this record are truly unforgettable--the lyrics are smart and there's attitude to spare." Songs on Fruit of Life include Girl, Spark, and Philadelphia Story.

Engineers set rushing record, continue to roll

by Joel Gillespie
Sports Reporter

The Rose-Hulman football team hasn't been bothered by its role as co-frontrunner in the ICAC. In fact, the team seems to be flourishing in it.

Rose travels to Franklin College this weekend. Franklin beat the Engineers last season, and Rose will be looking for revenge on Saturday. "We remember losing last year's game after blowing a big halftime lead, so we're still a little mad about that," said head coach Scott Duncan.

Against Manchester on October 8, and DePauw last Saturday, the Engineers were able to post two victories in conference play.

The games were completely different in terms of certainty of victory, but they both had the same result: a notch in the win column for Rose.

Rose made the trek to North Manchester two Saturdays ago to take on the winless Manchester Spartans. It was Manchester's homecoming, however, and they came out fired up at the chance to knock off the then 3-1 Engineers. It took a great comeback and a little luck at the end, but Rose managed to escape with a 36-35 victory.

The game started well for Rose, as they stuffed the Spartans on their first drive and forced a punt. Sophomore safety Tony Kohl burst through the line and snuffed the ensuing kick for his fourth block of the season. Sophomore receiver Billy Hammond picked up the ball on the 3-yard line and ran it in for a touchdown.

The Engineers looked ready to put the game away early, as Manchester went three-downs-and-out on their next possession. However, Paul Rogers fumbled on the punt return. Given new life, the Spartans drove down the field and scored to tie the score at seven apiece.

The game seesawed back and forth until Manchester scored with three and a half minutes remaining to go up 35-28. Engineer quarterback Todd Harris took up the challenge, though, and produced a 7-play, 79-yard drive that brought Rose to within a point with 1:04 left on the clock. Harris called his own number on a gutsy two-point conversion, sliding over the goal line to seemingly clinch the game.

Manchester had other ideas, however. Starting on their own 40 yard line, the Spartans used a combination of big plays and Rose penalties to drive inside the 10-yard line. The drive stalled out on the five, however, and placekicker Nathan Christoffel was called on for the 22-yard field goal with four seconds to go.

The kick looked true, but sailed just wide right, allowing the Engineers to squeak by.

Senior fullback Anthony Hammack had another stellar day on the ground, gaining 112 yards on 26 carries and scoring three touchdowns. Linebacker Brian Crissman once again led the team in tackles with 12.

Rose had a little easier time of it this past Saturday, jumping out to an early lead and rolling to a 43-16 victory over DePauw University at Phil Brown Field.

The potent Engineer ground attack piled up a school-record

423 rushing yards, led by Anthony Hammack's 150 and sophomore tailback A.J. Wilkerson's 146.

Duncan cited several differences between his team's performances versus DePauw and Manchester, the biggest of all being defense. "We played much better defense against DePauw, which was the key," stated Duncan.

"We were also able to convert on some big plays, which we didn't do against Manchester."

The defense was definitely strong, surrendering only 98 rushing yards to DePauw.

Rose wasted no time getting on the scoreboard, as Hammack punched it in from 3 yards out on the Engineer's first possession, capping a 68-yard drive. Hammack ran for 64 of those yards.

Rose scored on all four of their possessions in the first quarter, en route to a 22-2 lead at the end of the first period. DePauw scored on a return of a blocked extra point.

Todd Harris rushed for two touchdowns in the second quarter, as Rose went into the locker room with a 36-2 lead.

It was all a formality from that point on, as DePauw added two fourth-quarter touchdowns to tighten the final score.

Duncan gave credit to Hammack for keying the Rose-Hulman rushing game. He said, "They just couldn't stop Anthony. When they stopped him on the option, they couldn't stop him on the trap. When they stopped him on the trap, they couldn't stop him on the option."

Hammack did most of his damage in the first half, gaining 137 yards before sitting out most of the second half.

Shawn Patterson led the team in tackles with nine, followed by Brian Crissman's eight.

Jerome Williams and Chris Blanton each recorded an interception for the Engineers.

The game was costly for Rose injury-wise. Freshman Matt Dinovo, who had been starting at halfback for the Engineers, was expected to be lost for the season after undergoing knee surgery this week. He had cartilage damage in the knee, but the extent of ligament damage was unknown.

Also, reserve fullback Jason Gitt re-aggravated a back injury that will probably sideline him for the rest of the year.

If you can, travel to the game at Franklin College and support the red-hot Engineers.

Rose harriers win at invitational, gear up for ICAC Championships

by Mike Miller

Thorn Reporter/Athlete

The Rose-Hulman cross country team traveled to Sewanee, Tenn., this past weekend to take part in an invitational at the University of the South, an old conference rival. The Engineers were joined by Lipscomb, Alabama - Huntsville, Fisk and the University of the South.

Rose won the meet with a score of 32 points over second place Alabama-Huntsville's 46. This was an excellent meet for many of the Engineer runners, especially freshmen Jason Horsley, and Jason Long. Long was first for the Engineers and third overall, while Horsley was fourth on the squad and eighth overall. Both had personal bests.

"This was a big confidence builder for the team right before conference [championships]," remarked junior Mark Law, who sat out this meet with sophomore Eric Wind due to injuries.

With the best team performance on an 8K race, Rose has high hopes for the conference meet next week. The ICAC is the toughest its been in the past few years, with Wabash ranked second in the nation, and Anderson ranked 19th, along with Hanover and Manchester also looking strong, making the Engineers work cut out for them. "We do have Conference at home this year, so we should be able to use that to our advantage," said junior Kenny Anderson.

The cross country team will be competing on campus for the conference meet on Saturday, October 29 at about 11 am. We would appreciate support from the student body and faculty.

New NCAA football rules emphasizes sportsmanship before and after the game

by College Press Service

The pre-game college football ritual of intimidation has existed since the leather-helmet days of Knute Rockne.

But today's players have been doing more than trash-talking and staring each other down from the sidelines. In recent years, fights before the opening kick-off have become an all-too-common sight in college football stadiums across the nation, say National Collegiate Athletic Association officials.

But no more. Good sportsmanship is high on the NCAA's agenda this year, and teams looking for that extra motivational edge before the game begins may find themselves thrown for a loss--of 15 yards to be exact.

Beginning this football season, officials are in control of the game one hour before kickoff, giving them the authority to throw the yellow flag before the opening whistle. In addition, new rules are in place that will give officials more authority to control taunting and prolonged celebrations during the games.

Players who get a little too excited after a big play may also be penalized 15 yards. "Players will express excitement over a particular play but must never address remarks or gestures to opponents or spectators, nor may they spike the ball or throw it into the air," says the new rule, part of the NCAA's Points of Emphasis in the 1994 College Football Rulebook. "Choreographed or delayed spectacles have no validity in football and detract from its traditions... Enthusiasm without exhibitionism must be the goal."

Although there were fights throughout the season last year, players seemed especially riled up on Sept. 25, when many football games began to resemble a gridiron version of American Gladiators. Fights involving at least 10 players broke out in five games, including a bench-clearing brawl between the Colorado Buffaloes and the Miami Hurricanes. Players weren't alone in their brutality, however, as a post-game wrestling match between University of North Carolina assistant coach Ted Cain and North Carolina State assistant coach Don Thompson became the "play of the day" on television sportscasts across the country.

The new rules specify that players or coaches who fight will be ejected from the game. If the fight occurs in the second half, they will also be prohibited from playing in the first half of the next game. Players or coaches who leave the bench during a fight will be ejected from the game in progress and will be ineligible for the following game as well.

Soccer team loses first ICAC match, prepares for Wabash

The Rose-Hulman soccer team suffered its first ICAC loss Tuesday to DePauw University by a count of 7-1. This makes DePauw the only unbeaten team in the ICAC.

In a disappointing loss to the Tigers, Andy Doll scored the sole Engineer goal.

The Engineers will close out their home portion of the 1994 schedule on Saturday against another ICAC opponent, Wabash College at 11:30 a.m.

Rose is coming off a fall break weekend which saw the team lose 3-1 to both Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Colby-Sawyer.

Junior Gabe Ferland tied the Rose-Hulman career record for goals at 31 last Saturday against Colby-Sawyer in New London, New Hampshire. It was Ferland's seventh goal of the season. He tied the record held by Dave Watson, who played at Rose from 1972-82.

Ferland, whose hometown is Argus, New Hampshire, accomplished the feat in front of friends and family.

Junior Robb McGhie had the only goal against M.I.T. on an assist from Gabe Ferland.

Junior Gabe Ferland (8) concentrates on defending a Colby-Sawyer player during a match on the team's fall break trip. The Engineers fell to Colby-Sawyer 3-1, but Ferland tied the Rose-Hulman career scoring record at 31.
