The political wind seems to be keeping the presidential candidates in a continual state of complex invertebrate motion. Following the recent straw vote at the Institute, Edward White has been done by the other college polls to his alleged "elections." "Of all students" the number of about one hundred and ninety, one hundred and thirty-five of them were for White. With the exception of some college student body strongly Republican, the strongest was our town, Democrat, Dean Roberts, polling eighty-nine votes, with Bob giving the students a chance to vote for several other candidates.

Social and cultural events, as well as the changing political climate, have significantly impacted the lives of individuals in the late 19th century. The emergence of new technologies, such as phonographs and electric lights, has reshaped daily life. The rise of specialized signs, like that of Brunswick Phonographs, reflects the growing consumer culture.

The American Theatre, with its new production of "Cecil B. DeMille's Male and Female," continues to attract audiences. The play, a period drama, explores the themes of love, ambition, and the challenges of navigating the complex world of early 20th-century society. The cast, led by Sam H. Sterchi, brings to life the characters with poignancy and authenticity, captivating the audience with its portrayal of the era's social dynamics.

This fusion of art and technology not only entertains but also serves as a reflection of the society's transformation. The American Theatre, through its production, underscores the power of storytelling and the enduring relevance of historical narratives in shaping our understanding of the human experience.
