The fifth week of the quarter is one filled to the brim with activity for the Rose-Hulman community, past and present. Hot off the heels of the Study Abroad Fair and the Graduate School Fair is the Career Fair. At the end of the week is Homecoming, bringing back Rose grads for a weekend packed with activity after the other. Here are just some of the highlights for this busy week.

Kicking off the week is the Career Fair Bootcamp, running from 12:30 p.m. in the Career Services office. Students can bring in their resume to be reviewed by the professionals, getting tips on how to polish it before taking it to the Career Fair. This will also be the interview preparation for students who want to break up the talk to recruters before entering the fray.

Speaking of that fray, the Career Fair is this Wednesday from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m. in the SRC. Over 200 employers will be there looking for students. Full-time positions, internships, and co-ops are out there from all sorts of companies. Career Fair staples like AromarkMilltal USA, Eli Lilly, and Marathon Petroleum Company will be there; and for students looking for possible academic opportunities, Illinois Institute of Technology and Trine University are good options to look for.

Once Career Fair is over, the week cascades right into Homecoming. Friday holds several events on its own, with some of the major highlights in the evening, like the student and alumni at the Oakley Observatory at 8 p.m. After that is the Pep Rally, which will see a triumphing Queen Coronated at 8:30 p.m. at Cook Stadium. Immediately following is the time-honored tradition of the Bonfire: 266 railroad ties, stretching 21 feet into the air, set aside to determine the outcome of the homecoming football game. That game is set for Saturday at 2 p.m., but Saturday is not just for the game. Bright and early at 5 a.m. is the Rose’s 5k Fun Run and Walk, taking place on the SRC track. On the Root Quad at 9:30, they are unveiling the Hoover Mansion bust, which happens in tandem with the 65th anniversary of Muensch Hall.

Later on in the morning are the Academic Open Houses. From 11 a.m. until 1 p.m., past and current students have a chance to mingle with the faculty of their major’s department. Sciences, disciplines of Rose are scattered across the academic build- ings, with a more detailed list of locations available on My Rose-Hulman.

From the open house, Homecoming Saturday continues with Tent City, which kicks off at noon in the northwest lot of Cook Stadium. Tent from different clubs and organizations on campus will line the lot for alumni and current students to come, reconnect, and reminisce. Tent City food is right into the big Homecoming game against Mt. St. Joseph at 3 p.m. Rose currently stands at 2-0 in the HCAC, and Mt. St. Joseph stands at 1-1.

The Saturday Supper is held with the strongly held belief that food has the ability to bring people together.

The Bonfire is a time-honored tradition at Rose, ushering in Homecoming week.

A full schedule of events is available on My Rose-Hulman, including class reunions. The class of 1952 is celebrating their 65th reunion this year, making them the oldest class coming back to campus this year. But other events for specific graduation years abound, like the Graduates of the Last Decade (G.O.L.D.) Party. For more information and a complete schedule of events, check out the Homecoming webpage.

For those who were not aware, this past Tuesday was Voter Registration Day. This event is held every fourth Tuesday in September. Although you might think that this was nationally recognized day for many many years, it was first established a short time ago in 2012. As the name of the day suggests, this is the day each year the people who make up the general public are encouraged to register to vote in not just presidential elections, but anything and everything in between. What makes this an important day? Well, each year millions of people all across America will miss the opportunity to vote due to not being registered or having an expired registration. This day each year involves a number of different groups and organizations. This day each year is one of the days each year where the people who have a vote and an opinion in what is happening in their government.

While in the air, you are not allowed to text anyone on the ground during the duration of your flight. This is rather taboo because receive messages while on your phone. It is often told that you cannot have a mobile phone while in the air. Unless you are not allowed to text anyone on the ground, then you know that you are not allowed to text anyone in the air. Unless you’re on a Delta flight, that is.

Starting this October you will have the ability to send and receive messages while on your flight. This is rather taboo because it was often said that the act of texting interferes with pilot and airplane communications. Naturally, this news generated quite a bit of buzz.

Delta released a statement that they want their customers to be able to stay connected. This will be extremely useful, especially for people on long flights possibly overseas or flying for business. It will also come in handy in case of emergency or so you can still reach your loved ones on the ground and vice versa, if needed. Out of the 1,300 planes Delta has, only 130 of them will offer this feature to start off. It will be interesting to see if they make it a regular feature on all of their flights as time progresses and if any other airline companies follow in Delta’s footsteps.

Toga! Toga! Toga! A Review of National Lampoon’s Animal House

Lauren Wieneber

News Editor

I’ll be honest, I really only watched this movie so I could wear the “College” sweater my dad gave me. I know the one, John Belushi was in it...oh! I was supposed to say what I was watching. National Lampoon’s Animal House. There we go.

The mentality surrounding a college comedy follows Faber College’s Delta Chi Tau fraternity. The film is hurdles that College students face as they navigate the thin line between recklessness and responsibility. The film follows the exploits of sorority members, the sorority president Greg Marmalard (James Daugherty), and the Faber College chapter of the fraternity. As the film progresses, the students and professors face ethical dilemmas, and the College itself faces consequences for its actions.

As the film progresses, the students and professors face ethical dilemmas, and the College itself faces consequences for its actions.

Some of the most iconic moments of the film include the famous scene where the students dress up in animal costumes and perform a comedy skit. This scene is followed by a comedic fight scene where the characters use animal costumes to Hezbollah. The film is filled with many famous scenes and lines. It may be a reason why the film is often referred to as the "granddaddy of raunchy comedies".

However, the film also has its share of criticisms. Some felt that the film was too excessive and that the humor was tasteless. Others felt that the film lacked depth and that the characters were not well-developed. Despite these criticisms, the film remains a classic and is known for its humor and its impact on popular culture.

Today, the film remains a cult classic and is often referenced in other works of popular culture. It is also often used as an example of how far comedy can go, and how the boundaries of acceptable humor have shifted over time. Regardless of its criticisms, the film remains a beloved piece of cinematic history and is a must-see for anyone interested in the world of comedy.
Surviving Rose
Tips to Get Over Rose Boredom
Seun Ladipo
Lifestyle Editor

Somewhere throughout your occupation of this school we all call home, you will find yourself, either bored, tired of doing homework, alone, or all of the above. These times may occur early in your freshman year or may even wait until the end of your senior year, but they will come at some point. These times are seen by many as one of the dark sides of being in college as they are unavoidable and difficult to get through.

I am writing this today as a challenge to anyone that has found themselves in this situation. A challenge to get up and find a new hobby. To take up something that will not only take that miserable time and turn it into something useful, but something that may evolve into a pastime that you can continue long after Rose has sucked the life out of all of us. In these dark years, we must find our own light or we will never find our way to the end of the tunnel that is Rose-Hulman.

The first thing that comes to my mind is to pick up an instrument. Playing an instrument can be an extremely gratifying experience although as the sole purpose of an instrument is to produce noise, not all are adored equally by your peers. One instrument that comes to the mind of many when searching for one to pick up is the acoustic guitar. This seems like a good choice with its very shallow learning curve, general likability, ease of use (no cords and such), and relatively low cost, although these can all be deceiving. First off your guitar has no mute, so if you want to play without judgment you will have to find an empty room somewhere on campus to play in secret. HSS After Hours is a good option to check out. If you practice while your roommate is doing homework this has the potential to cause some serious problems no matter how good you think you are. A solution to this problem is to get an electric guitar as without an amp no one more than ten feet away can hear you play. To add to that you can even pick up a head- phone amplifier to play sweet nothing to yourself and practice all you want. I know right, what a time to be alive!

With an electric guitar you can really vary your style of play as there are so many different styles of guitar themselves all with different electronic components, and body styles, thing you miss out on with an acoustic gui- tar. You can even be a rebel and get a bass guitar or even both cause why not!

Another hobby you can pick up to better yourself as a human being is to create something tangible for yourself. This is quite a broad spectrum but as this school is full of engineers, we all must have some sort of creative spirit in ourselves. Whether we ex- press this spirit through our code or through a sewing machine. Using our knowledge to innovate and create things will not only foster our engi- neering prowess, but it will also help us find a passion in whatever it is that we enjoy. So I dare you to get out there and go make something. It does not matter how it turns out as long as you are having fun continue this until you have found pride in whatever you create.

In all, I dare you if you have had these fits of worthless boredom before to pick up an instrument or go create something. Rose-Hulman is truly a great place although everyone has those times in which we cannot take the beating that it is giving to us. In these times, we must find a way to survive so we can eventually say that we escaped the grasps of this school.

Andover University is the RHT Player of the Week. Andover University had an amazing game on Saturday with only 54 yards. Jason Rowland, tight end, number 87, said it better than anyone. Rose-Hulman is welcome for the victory because Anderson beat themselves. Jason Rowland has outstanding stats this season as he has one reception for one yard. Be-fore playing tight end this season, Jason was a defensive lineman in 2015 and 2016 with a grand total of three tackles (one was a tackle for loss). Congrats to Andover and good luck on your season.

Did you collect any fuccbois or basic white girls? If you haven’t, then try starting there. You’ll need five matches there before the tutorial is over and you can access the difficulty setting.

However, it sounds like you’re having trouble attracting even the scrummiest people on the app. Choosing Nick Cage was a good move, but maybe there’s something wrong with your profile description? Try avoiding terms like “My Little Pony” and “M’Lady” as they immediately turn away everybody. Instead, make sure your description has a few whole-some memes and a differential equation or two. Is the Haute a Hoax?

In a recent survey conducted by the Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology, it was found that 82% of Americans don’t believe that Terre Haute exists. The first to respond to the news was the Ominous Presence that resides somewhere in the Government. “Of course, Terre Haute exists! This is a preposterous accusation, and anybody in doubt is to be enrolled in mandatory re-education.”

Regardless of the official statement, scientists are flocking to Terre Haute to confirm the statement. Research stations have been set up discretely around town, though exact locations are kept secret as not to affect the study. There is definitely NOV one in the water tower on Rose campus. Students who see people in lab coats climbing the water tower are to avert their gazes and whisper “flickity flock there’s no such clock” three times in order to cleanse themselves. However, faculty and staff are encouraged to wave at the scientists as it helps validate their field of study. In order to see how the studies are progressing, we managed to corner a scientist who was busy fishing used Band-Aids out of the McDonald’s dumpster. When asked for a comment, she launched into an enthusiastic explanation. “The American people are surprisingly correct! We’ve been looking at the data and geographical-ly, there’s no room for Terre Haute. We think that the government has been fudging the size of Indiana to fit it, but Terre Haute is actually probable.” That is the end of her statement, as men in black suits escorted her into the back of a darkened van. We are left to wonder collectively as a campus: Is the Haute a Hoax?
