Back for a second time, Rose Diversity Connect wrapped up last Tuesday after two weeks of design, presentations, corporate battles, and leadership seminars. As a fun way for Diversity organizations to gain funding, members as well as SWIE, NSBE, SAE, SHPE, and any three different design challenges, all in the hopes of winning funds for their respective organizations (and themselves).

This year’s challenge was as diverse as their competitors, ranging from designing a tiny house community in Terre Haute to developing a system that will detect if children are left in the backseat of a vehicle. With teams of up to 5, students developed innovative solutions to solve these problems and presented their work over two weeks.

In the first round of judging, teams presented to a panel of Rose faculty and staff, including Dr. Brackin. Within minutes to hours, only 2 minutes for questions, teams were condensed all the way down into a short presentation, hoping to make it into the top 3 and advance to finals. With over 100 students competing, this year’s competition was a huge step up from last year’s weekend challenge.

President Connell’s address at closing ceremonies stressed the importance of getting involved in activities outside of class, something all of the industry professionals appreciated greatly.

In the finals, only three teams per challenge presented, leaving much more room for discussing their work and answering questions. These presentations were judged by representatives from companies such as Eli Lilly, Rockwell Collins, and Ford, students were eligible for individual prize amounts up to $250. Their organizations, with all prizes for donations up to $500 as well.

While the organization funds are specifically meant to cover operating costs and travel, individual prizes could be used for anything, making them far more attractive.

By sponsored lunches and fun workshops, sponsoring companies were more involved in Rose Diversity Connect than ever. With workshops run by companies like Allison Transmission, Marathon, and Toyota, competitors were given the opportunity to network with potential employers in many ways.

Even after two weeks of stress and dedication at such a critical time in the Rose calendar, students found the competition highly rewarding. Stay tuned for Rose Diversity Connect’s return, likely in fall of 2018.

German Unification Day

A historical holiday took place this past Tuesday, October 3rd. Known as German Unification Day, it marks the 30th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall. The Rose Thorn for Saudi Arabia, one giant leap for Saudi women.

On September 26, 2017, King Salman of Saudi Arabia issued an order that the ban on women driving in his country would end starting June 2, 2018. This order is a significant step forward in the fight for women’s rights and a momentous occasion for Saudi Arabia. Women in the country have long been denied the right to drive, and this new law signals a major shift in Saudi Arabia’s social and political landscape.

The new law is the result of a decade-long campaign by activists and advocates for women’s rights in Saudi Arabia. The Guardian Council, which had previously ruled that women were not allowed to drive, has now overturned this decision. This change in the law is expected to have far-reaching implications for women in Saudi Arabia, allowing them to travel more freely and gain greater autonomy.

However, while the lifting of the driving ban is a significant victory, there are still many challenges and obstacles that women in Saudi Arabia face. The guardianship system, which requires women to obtain permission from a male guardian to travel or engage in certain activities, remains intact. Additionally, women still face discrimination in the workplace, education, and other areas.

Despite these challenges, the lifting of the driving ban is a historic moment for Saudi Arabia and a testament to the power of grassroots activism and advocacy. The future is bright for women in Saudi Arabia, and this milestone is a crucial step towards achieving full equality and human rights for all.

German Unification Day was celebrated with events across the country, including speeches, performances, and ceremonies. The day was marked with a sense of pride and celebration among Germans, as they reflected on the achievements of the past 30 years and looked forward to the challenges and opportunities of the future.

Watching the trailer for the new movie mother! I was excited to see the blood pumping through my veins in excitement and terror. All day leading up to the showing the thrill was building up to the moment I sat down in the theater looking up at the giant screen. After watching the trailer I was sure this movie would be a nightmarish-inducing thriller, but I was surely disappointed...

From the start of the showing, the characters and setting put off a palpably strange vibe. The main characters, played by Jennifer Lawrence and Javier Bardem, were not even given names, rather they were symbol of Mother Nature and God. As it turned out, the entire movie became a metaphor for humans taking advantage of and destroying Mother Nature in their allegiance to some religion. The God figure was an author who had many fans; his followers became obsessed with him and his family, doing anything they could be blessed by him. Their actions become very disturbing and truly disgusting to watch. All the while, Mother is suffering, frantically trying to keep her home and family together. The movie is very bold in its message and overall make the audience uncomfortable and unsettling. A little more than half-way through the movie, events take a turn for the worse. Saying everything goes absolutely insane is even an understatement. I still don’t know how to explain the pure strangeness of the events and how disturbed they make the audience feel.

If you are looking for an adrenaline rush thriller or a scary film to use an excuse to cuddle, this is NOT the right choice. The plot and underlying messages are not for everyone, since hardly anyone truly enjoy being told they are part of the rape of Mother Nature that is destroying the community, but the movie was thought provoking and could be eye opening if watched with the right mindset. There are many allusions to the Bible—Adam and Eve, Cain and Abel, the Garden of Eden—that add to the interpretation and understanding of character’s actions. Slowly, then all at once the message is displayed through horrific events and gut-wrenching scenarios.

If you enjoy movies with deeper, hidden meanings, this movie definitely checks off the list. If you have to write a report on a movie, mother! has a lot of potential. Otherwise, this movie is not for everyone, since it is scary film to use an excuse to cuddle, this is NOT the right choice.
Kanye West released The Life of Pablo, his 9th studio album, in 2016. This album was received quite well by the hip-hop community as it transcended all of his previous styles of music, from the socially critical Late Registration to the brash music, from the socially critical 808s & Heartbreaks to the more polished and refined Late Registration.

Since then Kanye has not released any professional studio albums although a few fans on the /r/Kanye subreddit on Reddit have taken the time to remix a few of his popular albums. That being said these remixes are not very typical because all of the extra content in these albums are sampled from previous or unused samples by Kanye West himself.

These albums are geared towards the fans of Kanye West rather than just anyone as the obscure references and minor changes may be overlooked by anyone unfamiliar with the original album or his previous music.

This album also has much more fluff than the original, as most of the added content are extended intros or outros to tracks. This again alienates anyone not familiar with his music while on the other hand making it that much more special to anyone who has invested into his discography. I rate this fan album 8 Yeezy Boots out of 10.

I hope this picture of a happy Kanye brightens your day.

Album Review: The Life of Paul

A Fan Remix You Do Not Want To Miss

“Life of Paul” stands at one hour and six minutes long, while the original album is only one hour and forty minutes long. The Life of Paul is definitely geared towards the fans of Kanye West rather than just anyone as the obscure references and minor changes may be overlooked by anyone unfamiliar with the original album or his previous music.

The Life of Pablo, produced by Reddit user Dorian Ye, is by far the best fan production. The album was so similar to the original that Kanye himself produced a few tracks of his own with salvaged samples such as Father Stretch My hands Pt.1, to the instrumental in “I Love Kanye.”

Along with extended samples in this album there are also extra unused parts by Kanye West himself. Highlights uses an extra sample from the song “Beautiful” by Carole King along with two extra verses rapped by Kanye West.

I hope this picture of a happy Kanye brightens your day.

We’re disobeying the fundamental starting point of rhetoric: think about your audience.

The world appears to be growing more chaotic, and we should see American leadership when we must feed it. Behind the striking turn in the world is that Trump administration’s lack of experience, consistency, and leveling of military power.

Since Donald Trump’s 2016 campaign he has shown characteristic discord in a world of organization or stability. During the ill-fated push to repeal Obamacare, Trump failed to stay on message or achieve his goals and campaign promises. Instead, he was met with relentless petty attacks, Trump’s own management style is one of comfort and insincere claims. He has inadvertently fed all but given up any ideas of leadership and his policies are causing his unpopularity.

Worse is the fact that confirmed appointees are openly hostile to the Trump administration. In the State, Rex Tillerson, upon assuming his title, portrayed himself as a forty-eight ambassador. By design and design, Tillerson has to overcome the inherent deprivation of his predecessors and the inadequate knowledge of the Department of State in 1979, effectively knocking one of my most important ideas for engaging the international community. The executive branch is critical to maintaining and promoting American leadership around the world.

When Trump is not talking well, the United States motions to achieve its positions and promotes it interests. These activities cover a variety interests, whether supporting American exports, promoting American culture, and backing lobbying foreign governments who are committing human rights abuses. None of those above efforts have carefully undertaken when the regional actors have no agencies with on the administration.

Trump has shown himself in developing any cohesive doctrine that he can promote and implement at the federal level. His admirers’ inexperience is a liability to the run the government. To the rest of the world this represents a widespread of American values, American interests, and cultural, social, and adopted individual liberties.

So how do we go about understanding other values systems before engaging them in debate? We don’t listen like a lawyer trying to follow intricating evidence. You have to listen to understand. You listen to your oppotent’s words, their body, their values they appeal to. They appeal to what they think important, to Why, try to understand.

It is a necessary process for some because it involves the ul-time aim: giving ‘big’ legiti-mate, a big, you must understand them, and to do that,
’subhuman and un-
educated’ way.

Now that you’ve listened, start to piece together the ideology. What keywords are used?

What expressions? Digest these and make a list of terms. Then identity, and position. They may just value something different than you. And that, actually, is okay.

Why bother asking for the United States’ position if no one will answer the phone or simply tell you to read Trump’s twitter feed.

Trump has threatened a free trade agreement with the United States, North Korea, and and polities need to understand its tactics and responsibilities very closely.

Liberals do not. You can begin to see how certain policies connect to values.

Therefore, you can begin to understand the different policies based on these values.

Overall, if you want to convince someone, you have to understand how they feel to understand what they believe and accept that

It is that they could be much tor either. So there may be some-thing different than you. And

That is a shame the White House has become an adult day care center,” tweeted Republican Senator Bob Corker. With control of Congress, Republicans would do well begin enforcing the legislators’ check on the executive.

With the stands filled for homecoming, the Fightin’ Engineers were able to domi-nicate a team that they hadn’t beaten in the previous three matchups. Rose-Hulman did so with their usual resilience, five interceptions, six sacks, and 408 yards in total offense.

Rose-Hulman took a quick 21-lead in the first quarter. On the third play of the game, Andrew Dion connected with Carrett Wright on a 57-yard touchdown pass. Three minutes later, Rae Hartnick scored on an 8-yard touchdown pass from Dion. With a little over a minute left in the first quarter, Noah Thomas generated points off a team that they hadn’t beaten in the previous three matchups.

Rose-Hulman improved to 5-1 on the season and have yet to be stopped in continuous play. The Fightin’ Engineers will head out on Friday to face off with in-state conference foe Manchester for Saturday afternoon.
