Dance Theater of Harlem

Lauren Wiseman

Staff Writer

Last week Dance Theatre of Harlem came to Terre Haute to give a Master Class for the Terre Haute Academy of Dance and to perform at Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology, sponsored in part by the Rose-Hulman Center for Diversity. The Dance Theatre of Harlem was found- ed by Arthur Mitchell and Karel Shook in 1969.

From the beginning, it was called “one of ballet’s most exciting under- takings,” according to a 1971 article in The New York Times.

Dance Theatre of Harlem prides itself on “commitment toward reaching the lives of young people through the arts,” according to their website.

This photo does not do this justice. You need to see all of the bottles in one place because there is a story behind them.

I would take almost 2000 gallons of Coca-Cola to fill these bottles! Painted bottles have grown within it.

As an integral part of the Terre Haute community for hundreds of years, it was no surprise that Rose-Hulman had a bottle of its own. Painted bottles are displayed in the Performing Arts Center, which is the original Coke bottle design, one of Terre Haute’s most iconic landmarks.

Coke Bottle Exhibit Revealed!

Editor in Chief

Last Thursday, months of hard work and artistic expression were un- veiled to the Terre Haute community in the form of 27 fiberglass Coca Cola bottles. Shaped like the original glass Coke bottle design, one of Terre Haute’s most iconic landmarks, the bottles were painted in ways that represented Terre Haute and the communities that have grown within it.

‘On the Nature of Daylight’ and danced in London Washington was the rendition of “This Bitter Earth.”

Vinet Fernandez and Da’von Diane portrayed a couple exploring the possibility of love, in which the 'bitter earth may not be so bitter after all.'

Dance Theatre followed that performance with “Valse Fantaisie,” which took place on a Nicho- lar’s seat against the white and black background.

The next act in the Performing Arts Series at Hattifield Hall will be the Texas Tenors, who take the stage May 4 at 7:30 pm.

President Trump signed a $1.3 trillion spending bill on Friday, ending a weeklong push to fund the government and avoid a third government shutdown this year. The bill funds the government through September.

Russian President Vladimir Putin won reelection on Sunday, March 18. Putin won 75% of the vote with 67.5% turnout.

Putin’s victory was expected given his popularity, with polling consistently showing 80% approvals.

The election was widely consid-

Putin’s only viable competitor was barred from entering the race because of a recent conviction, although some allege that the charges were trumped-up.

President Trump congratulated Putin on his reelection victory over a phone call, during which they discussed various subjects. Briefing materials leaked afterwards included a section stating “DO NOT CONGRATULATE.”

Putin’s reelection comes amid heightened tensions with Western leaders.

The Trump White House has refuted anything that was in the book, having been authorized. I don't deny any of what he said, but del Toro and Vanessa Taylor have reinvented [Shape of Water] into a new classic on its own.

TIRE & FURY! What is happening in the chamber of secrets

This coming from the man that was one of Trump's first hires. The Shape of Water has revealed the 21st Century President. It was surprising how exactly true what is being said in this book. Honestly, I find myself becoming more indifferent; this book left me with a lot of concerns for the state of our government—more even than before.

According to Fire and Fury, the White House under the Trump administration has yet to have a period of time when everything was not in pure and utter chaos. This is largely due to the fact that there are major divisions between the people closest to the president on what he should do for just about everything. The three main factions in the white house are the family (i.e. Jared and Ivanka) and their line of thinking which more closely follows the line of traditional New York Democrats, the Republican establishment (hoping to push Trump into the Fours to Four's, Labytopeth—oh and his tal- es Ominous to the Faun in Pan) and his tal- es Ominous to the Faun in Pan) and his tal- es Ominous to the Faun in Pan). Therapy, he has done everything from Billy in Hocus Pocus to the Faun in Pan's Labytopeth—and his tal- es Ominous to the Faun in Pan. The Amphibian Man ends up doing some pretty horrific things (more on that later), but you don't care when you see it happen. He makes the Amphibian Man seem almost cute.

At the 2018 Academy Awards, Guillermo del Toro's fantasy romance The Shape of Water took home a number of Oscars, including the Oscar for Best Picture. After being inundated with transcendent films of the movie—and hearing it was nothing short of a masterpiece—I decided to check out the film and see if the hype was justified. The Shape of Water is about the president’s ear, and the lack of anyone who can accept any of this. Honestly, I find that disheartening because this administration truly believe that what is being said in this book. Honestly, I find myself becoming more indifferent; this book left me with a lot of concerns for the state of our government—more even than before.

A Kentuckians Quick Guide to Bourbon

Thomas Hall
Staff Writer

Over the past few years, the bourbon market has been absolutely booming growing over 70% in the past 5 years. Now distilleries are opening up right and left in hope of sashing on the growing trend. So I thought would compile some notes for that particular bottle.

First and foremost it is important to know the difference between a bourbon and a regular whiskey. So, bourbon is to whiskey as squares are to rectangles and I know you all understood that because let’s face it we are nerds. The five things that must be their in order to make a whiskey a bourbon whiskey are:

1) 80% of whiskey must be made in Kentucky, which is 95% of bourbons are and where it originated from.
2) It has to be aged for a minimum of 4 years while some bourbon age for 25+ however like most whiskies the older it is the more expensive it is.
3) The mash the mash is made from has to be made up of at least 51% corn.
4) Bourbon must be bottled at a minimum of 40% alcohol.
5) It must be aged in charred oak barrels.

While this is just the barebones it should be enough to get you started down the ever-growing craft spirits industry. Personally I recommend starting to drink bourbon when of age with someone that is into it because they will be able to teach you what their personal favorites are and point out the important tasting notes for that particular bottle.

Always Drink Responsibly

Golden nectar of the gods

80 proof (40% alcohol) the bourbon can not contain any added flavoring, coloring or other additives, which is what makes Jack Daniels whiskey, not a bourbon, and 2) has to be aged for a minimum of 4 years while some bourbon age for 25+ however like most whiskies the older it is the more expensive it is. In this is a 8th unofficial rule in my book, it must be made in Kentucky, which 95% of bourbons are and where it originated from.

Next everyone (over the age legal drinking age) should know how to drink bourbon properly because if you do not know how to drink it right you will probably hate it. In order to drink it right, you should first take a breath in then sip the bourbon then breathe out this helps dramatically cut down on the burn of drinking such a high proof bourbon and allows you to more fully experience the flavor palate.

Finally, again if you are of age you should know how to order bourbon at a bar. If you want a glass with just straight bourbon in it order it neat, some places will then ask you how many fingers you would like, this is not a sexual instead they are basically asking how many shots you would like because traditionally one pour of bourbon was equopant to the width of one of the bartender’s fingers. Instead, if you want some ice in it cool it down a bit, of course, is on the rock, my personal favorite. Also, there are countless cocktails that use bour- bon the most famous and best is a Manhattan.

In all I am still not sure about the permanence of this lifestyle change although I can definitely say I am becoming a better more well rounded person for trying this out. Stay tuned for the third and final chapter of this story coming out in I have no idea how long.

Viewing things as grey has always been praised as a sign of maturity, but sometimes it is just a sign of laziness.

Viewing things as grey has always been praised as a sign of maturity, but sometimes it is just a sign of laziness.

Some whites tried to continue extracting profits from their companies by manufacturing goods for sale outside cities where crime and child labor were rampant. Fortunately, the people who elected the current South African government were not easily fooled, and voted out of office the political parties that controlled the lines and manipulation of the white devil.

Unfortunately, they still feel tied to their homeland. Because they can still hide behind the claims of being beyond that, a community of whites who share a common history with them, want to stick it to us if they can and help each other as long as we’re allowed to live. This presents a problem for the blacks of South Africa—whether black or white, because in South Africa it's not really holding onto the rights of its founding stock. If the whites won’t leave, we will have to encourage the oppressed classes to make use of our experience, we’ve seen civil disobedience uses to tear away the alluring whites which has been mostly successful.

Some whites even work on a farm telling the local town that their boss will lock up the house and therefore the window of time in which the security systems will be offline. The black looks will head over, wait for the white to leave the house, then they’ll either go in and take whatever they can remember as heavy or hold a knife to their throat, tie their hands and legs and enter the house. It’s common to torture the victim and his family for quite some time, using power drills on his head, tearing down the roof, and raping their little girls to death. The father is encouraged to watch. Violence works well, more and more white people are trying to leave their homeland (because they’ll be killed) and some of the blacks are racist and multiculturalism is better, but Australia may be an exception. We'll Deen, matter to me how they go, as long as they go.

We do not call for the slaughter of white people...at least, not now.

This was supposed to be about South Africa and the land. I have been writing an article about school shootings for the past month and half, but by the time I finish a draft another school shooting is taking place. I am tired of writing about the headlines, rendering my article hollow. This movement is inevitably followed by a media storm of killer hoopoe and Twitter hashtags that attempts to gunshot for the elecience on Capitol Hill. (Title)

The heartbreak of the gun-rights white NRA-funded commercials that attempts to protect Americans to their Second Amendment right to bear arms. While making the frames of political rhetoric on both sides are different, it is the same difference of people weather this bombardment of news in different ways. Some take it as a forceful reminder that some are not even a gunivative, "keyboard warriors," their confusion in their track is certainly followed by the scenes they hide behind.

The vast majority of us, however, are happy enough not making a political stance. The white men have the right to protest Second Amendment but I don’t think they are endorsing white supremacists or even trying to go out there and own the news media. Still, there is a widespread idea that being on the left side of political issues somehow makes one intelligible, which make it difficult for the Biden campaign. In reality, not choosing a side makes us complete as citizen in the injustice as the perpetrators.

There are countless examples of individuals, particularly celebrities, being criticized for expressing thoughts that stray too far from the political median. When Labor leader Jeremy Corbyn spoke out against some of Donald Trump’s “thaglish and scary” remarks, Fox News personality Laura Ingraham condemned him for speaking outside of his expertise, ordering him to “shut up and disappear.” Jimmy Kimmel’s infamous monologue on the recent Academy Awards sparked a firestorm of rage from the mainstream media, causing the third consecutive “boycott” of the ceremony. The most apt example of American’s obsession with the middle ground is how the new cast from the response to the recent shootings in Parkland, Florida. In the wake of the mass-shooting tragedy, people quickly noticed that the teenager survivors were unexpectedly vocal about what needed to change to prevent this from recurring. One area the students and activists found social media focusing on was reformed gun control, a point of contention with extensive political ramifications. Within days, ungrounded rumors began to spread that the two most vocal Parkland students, David Hogg and Emma Gonzalez, were “critic actors” hired by left-wing lobbyists to feud sufficing and push the liberal agenda of destroying the Second Amendment from view-erwhelming interests in Youtube and Reddit comment threads to rafts with well-known conservative radio hosts like Alex Jones, the Parkland kids were heavily bombarded for speaking their minds. They were told to stop politicizing a tragedy, when that was the last thing they wanted to do. Whether we decide to accept or not, policymakers are in a position to implement the changes necessary, “Making it political” gets things done.

The next time you see a 16-year-old at a March For Our Lives rally holding a poster you disagree with, think twice before berating the "Tide Pod Challenge" for generating something they do not understand, and consider the bravery it takes to actually stand up for something. Maintaining a lach再造ism, the movement is becoming increasingly untenable in modern society. Soon politics will impact everyone, and the sooner we come to terms with this reality, the sooner we can affect some much-needed change.

Hailey Hoover
Sports Editor

Thanks to his recent efforts, Rose Hulman sophomore, Ian Landwehr has been named Player of the Week by The Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference. Landwehr earned No. 1 singles victories against Franklin and DePauw. His overall singles record thus far is 9-3. He is currently at a 6-6 overall right now and 6-1 against NCAA Division III competitors. So congratulations to Ian, and best of luck to him and the rest of the men’s tennis team as they continue their season.
