From a young age, Dick Osborn, an alum and NASA retiree, came to speak at Rose Hulman Institute of Technology. The event was held on Monday, September 24, 2018.

Dick concluded his talk with some important lessons for not only him, but all of NASA as well. Dick Osborn emphasized the importance of teamwork in achieving lunar orbit and stated that anyone who is willing to put on a pair of shoes and participate is important. He noted that it is important to recognize that tactics and casual assault can occur against people of any gender identification or sexual orientation by some one who is also from any gender identification or sexual orientation.

Dick Osborn also shared a personal story about Apollo 13, which was the first mission to achieve lunar orbit and included Dick in its decision to go. Dick Osborn pointed out the importance of teamwork and collaboration in achieving success in any endeavor.

Dick Osborn encouraged students to think critically and to be proactive in understanding and preventing sexualized violence. He concluded his talk by reminding everyone of the importance of supporting each other and standing together.

The event was a great opportunity for students to learn from Dick Osborn's experiences and to gain new perspectives on the importance of teamwork and collaboration.

If you are interested in learning more about Dick Osborn or his experiences at NASA, you can visit his website at dickosborn.com. Additionally, Rose Hulman offers many resources for students who want to learn about the history of space exploration and the importance of teamwork in achieving success.

Hurricane Florence dealt a staggering blow to the eastern coast, and will no doubt have incalculable fiscal and psychological repercussions for its victims.

One week ago, Hurricane Florence made landfall in the Carolinas. In that week, over 30 inches of rain fell, 37 people lost their lives, and millions lost power to their homes. Now, in the aftermath of what has been dubbed the greatest flooding event in East Coast history, the damages are being totaled, and the figures are staggering. Estimates range between $7.5 and $22 billion, $1 to $2 billion of that being lost revenue. The majority of that lost revenue is from the states’ agricultural industries. Since Florence struck, while crops were still being harvested, anything that wasn’t already harvested is likely now ruined underwater. Major crops from the area include tobacco, corn, cotton, potatoes, and peanuts. In addition to crops, Florence has also been heavily impacted by the storm. North Carolina’s Department of Agriculture estimates that 3.4 million chickens have been lost, as well as about 5,500 hogs.

We might say the worst part is over, but the Carolinas think the worst is yet to come, as last week’s powerful winds and heavy rains have led to more severe problems, especially the risk of heavy pollution. The heavy rains caused 65,000 gallons of sewage to flow into a tributary of the Cape Fear River. To add to the mess, the contents of a coal ash landfill are flowing into a nearby lake.

Several people and organizations are donating large sums of money to the relief effort. The NFL Foundation has pledged $1 million, and Michael Jordan is donating $2 million dollars on his own. Fanatics, an NBA partnership, is selling t-shirts, and 100% of the profits are going towards relief efforts. Target is also donating $1.5 million. If you would also like to contribute, a simple Google search of “Hurricane Florence” will show a big blue donation button underneath all of the top news stories, and Google will match up to a million dollars in donation.
The Venture Bros. Most Popular Animated TV Show Returns!

Andrew Henderson Staff Writer

This summer we saw the return of one of Adult Swim’s most popular adult animated TV shows for its 7th season, The Venture Bros. If you did not know Venture Bros. is a animated comedy following the misadventures of the titular Venture family, made up of Dr. Venture (the son of the world’s greatest super scientist), and his two sons Hank and Dean. Venture Bros. is a well thought out satire of everything nerdy, from superheroes and villains, to Johnny quest (which is canon in universe, as the same company owns Jonny Quest and Venture Bros.), spies and G.I. JOE. While the shows does focus in on the Venture family, it contains a wide array of character that return episode to episode, and a deep history to the actual world. It is quite the great show, which I would recommend to nearly anyone, especially people who like 70’s and 80’s nerd cliches.

"[This] is a well thought-out satire of everything nerdy, from superheroes and villains, to Johnny quest, spies, and G.I. JOE.”

Which is why I am glad to say the seventh season meets the standard of the rest of the show, in fact it might surpass past those standard. The first two episodes of season 7 have been some of the best episodes I’ve seen for the whole show, have been asking since season 1. I also saw a return of my favorite character in the whole show, Red Death, and some flashbacks to him when he was younger. I really cannot recommend these episodes enough for already existing fans, and happily enough the rest of the season seems to be keeping the quality to a high level. I am especially enjoying how much character progression Hank, Dr. Venture, and Dr. Monarch are getting this season. With 7 episodes of this 10 episode quite an excellent show and you will be missing out if you are not watching. If you are interested in streaming Venture Bros. right now adult swim has all the episodes released for season 7 (though you’ll need a membership with one of their service provider to get some of the center episodes of the season), and Hulu has all of the earlier season’s episodes for catching up or starting the whole series.

What happened to feature length 2D animated films? Why did we stop producing them? 2D animation is flashy and sure it producing them? 3D animation films? Why did we stop producing them? Thad Hughes

The rise in the amount of automation in fashion enterprises over the past decade has effected the market of goods in many ways. The rate at which we can produce products of high quality has sky rocketed and companies such as Nike and Adidas have used this in their favor to control different markets. The way companies use this to control the market is by making a very small amount of a product at a very cheap rate and selling these products giving the illusion that this product was very exclusive. This cycle of consumerism brings people back to be the first in line to get the next product they create allowing these companies to sell out of all of their product on these periodic releases every time. There is no extra product and they can sell their product for more than they would have at a wider release because everyone want to be the one to have such a product.

This has also sparked a whole movement of people who create and sell computer programs that can help them acquire these products very easily. This allows them to buy these products and resell them again at an even higher rate sometimes in excess of 10 times their original value.

These different factors effect such a market as sneakers as the companies have such little stock and the stock of which they do have is cut in half by the amount of people who use illegal software to acquire them. This has caused the rise in professional fakes and communities that have banded together to help each other acquire replicas of these exclusive products that even an expert could not tell fake from real.

There are factories in Asian countries that work with different people throughout the world doing their best to achieve a 1:1 replica of the products that people can not easily acquire. In the sneaker market people can easily purchase almost any pair of shoes at even cheaper the price and there is a near abundant quantity of shoes. This comes at a price as people have to live with the guilt of wearing fake shoes and you get what you pay for when it comes to the quality of the sneaker as well.

Sites such as Kanye-tothet.com and reddit /r/repsneakers are places in which the validity of replicas in culture is discussed as well as the places one can go to acquire these products.

On August 14 of this year, Pennsylvania's Attorney General Josh Shapiro's announced the release of their grand jury report that identified at least 1,000 children that were sexually-assaulted by more than 300 Catholic priests. "It is the larg¬est and most comprehensive report into child sexual abuse within the Catholic church ever produced in the United States," said the Attorney General. By supreme court order every essay of the names in the report are redacted because of ongoing in¬vestigation of alleged sexual abusers. This builds on the 2002 Boston Globe Spotlight report that identified 289 abuser priests and the 2002 Philadelphia grand jury report which identifies over 60 abusive priests and shows other investiga¬tions on child sexual abuse in recent years. The report was being shielded light on a sys¬tematic cover up done by church officials to protect the name of the Catholic Church.

The list was released by the Pennsylvania Attorney General, other states have begun to fol¬low suit with Minnesota and Missouri. Other states that have made announcements of their commencing efforts into child sexual abuse investigations include New Mexico, Nebraska, New York, and New Jersey. It is difficult to know if or when other states will begin investiga¬tions of their own, either way, the effort will likely be resisted by clergy members who have seen the effects of previous in¬vestigations on membership. This has been a history of previ¬ous child sexual abuse investiga¬tions in other countries, namely, Scotland, Germany, Sweden, and Japan. Previous full country probes have result¬ed in a decline in Catholic mem¬ber ship and states of America that expose child abuse in the church are likely to motion similar trends as the integrity of these institutions are being questioned.

There are some behaviors conducted by church officials that demonstrate cognitive dis¬sonance. One example includes the zero-tolerance policy on abuse or sexual misconduct from the other hand, it's somehow okay to cover up the fact that teachers of the Catho¬lic faith are sexually assaulting young innocence. The problem is in protecting the 'name' is not only irresponsible but al¬so criminal. Unfortunately, it has also been noted that do to the age of the sexual abuse alle¬gations, many of the abuser priests that have been identified can't be prosecuted due to the statute of limitations on sexual abuse. The behaviors described above details a massive abuse of power from the spiritual leaders we hold so much trust in. Al¬though I find the core values of the Catholic church to be aligned with a holy purpose, I believe reform is needed and Catholics from the affected are¬as need to take back their church by standing up to deet¬ful behavior and demand that known abusers be removed from office. It is very unfortunate for all the good-hearted Catholics that may experience a bad name from these investigations but I believe it is time to bring trans¬parency.

Over the summer I decided to make my summer by reading IMDb's reviews of controversial movies. I believe "controversial," I mean reboots of popular movies with female leads. I encountered reviews that said movies like Ghostbusters, Ocean's 8, and Men in Black as fishy films and tasked it as it deserved to be. There were reviews that offshore movie like Ocean's 8, "for the sake of making a movie about women criminals to ap¬pease the 'me too' and empowerment crowd." Basically, there was a faction in the In¬ternet which decided that mov¬ies like Ghostbusters and Ocean's 8 were an excuse to ask for permission to vomit again. Hollywood has no more ideas, putting women in Ghostbusters, Star Wars, and "X-MEN (not women)."

Well, I'll be the first to admit that the 2016 Ghostbusters was real¬ly bad (and I didn't even watch the last 30 minutes be¬cause I got bored). I never got around to watching Ocean's 8, but watching it and not thinking about these movies is second to the point I want to make: female reboots are missing the point. There are a slew of female¬centered reboots. A Dirty Rotten Scoundrels remake, a reboot of A League of Extraordinary Gentlemen (Geostorm), and a Lord of the Flies film for children from an all-girl school. For some, this is great: Dirty Rotten Scoundrels is a hilarious con artist movie; A League of Ex¬traordinary Gentlemen is some¬thing of a cult classic. Women have been missing out on mov¬ies like this, and so giving them an opportunity to shine in these set¬tings is—on the surface—a great idea. However, by contin¬uing to swap women at the front of major franchises, this pre¬sents two major problems when it comes breeding this new cin¬ematic female. The first of these indicates women are happy set¬ting, the second is women will always be chasing legitimacy. What does "settling mean", in this instance? It means wom¬en on the acting side are OK settling for doing what guys did already and it means women on the directing side are OK settle¬ting for a movie they have seen already, just with better makeup. There are plans to re¬boot a lot of things with women at the center, and because peo¬ple talk about it, people go see it, generating the money studies are looking for. This just tells studios that yes, this is what audiences want out of their movies and what women want from their entertainment.

There are good original movies for women out there, too: Annihilation did really well last year. It earned respectable reviews, it was based on a nov¬el, but it was not a reboot of a different movie with men. Com¬pared to female-led reboots, then, it had an advantage. Like Wonder Woman, Lady Bird, and other female-fronted movies, they were allowed to exist on their own—and that brings us to the next problem.

With female-led reboots, these movies are always chasing legitimacy, and at a disad¬vantage to win over fans from the beginning. Reboots in gen¬eral are designed for being cheap cash-ins (which all mov¬ies they have are), and so when people as¬sume the movie is trying to force an agenda on top of it, the movie is fighting an uphill bat¬tle. It is a constant competition to prove that women can be just like the guys, they can do any¬thing a guy can do, et cetera ad nauseam. Women in film are reduced to being the kid sister who wants to play with her old¬er brother, who only values her when their mother insists he "let her play, too." Supporting women in film is great, and the more movies written with women in the leads, the better representation will become. With better repre¬sentation, we will be able to add more characters alongside im¬mortal female icons like Ellen Ripley and Sarah Connor. At the same time, maybe reboots are not the best way to go about this.

Oh, next week, we can see that maybe they are.

Men’s Golf Team Becomes Franklin Invitational Champions

This past weekend, the Men’s Golf Team was able to take home a win at the Franklin Invitational. After the two days of competition the team was able to finish with a combined score of 614. Rose’s own Max Gogel made a trying effort for the individual champion title. Ultimately the title went to Alan Showalter of Franklin after a round of sudden death. Next weekend the team will be playing in the DePauw Dan Quayle Collegiate Classic.

Fact of the Week

There’s a goblin living in the sub-basement of Deming. If you see her, make sure to compliment her on the recent engagement to the Screature of Scum Pond. They make a horrible couple.

Heard ‘Round Campus

“Wait... what is 2*7?”
“Uh, 14?”
“Oh, I thought it was 15 this whole time.”

New Art Installation on Campus

We don’t know why it happened.
We don’t know what it means.
We didn’t think it was aesthetically pleasing.
It was modern art.

WACKY PROF QUOTES

“I often wonder if the Terre Haute Family Video is a front for something else.”
-Dr. Mark Hays

“I feel like Blood Alcohol Content should be a metric somehow.”
-Dr. Rebecca Berchich

“Don’t let people who have been at a wedding all day try to pull a splinter out of your foot.”
-Dr. Stephanie Poland

Vaguely Described Places on Campus

1. That weird hallway in the section of Moench with the doors and the awkward platform.
2. The one res hall with chronic kitchen fires.
3. The once thriving sandwich-assembly station.
4. That spot with the broken printer.
5. The nap/study spot without the outlets.
6. The failed metaphor.
7. The one res hall that always smells like burnt popcorn.
8. The unexpectedly warm vestibule.
9. Fries machine broke, please come back tomorrow.
10. That corner with the ever-accumulating pile of Rose Thorns.
11. That place that generates all of the off campus traffic.
12. The Rose police station.
13. The one res hall that successfully incubated lice.
14. That stretch of road with more accidents and no stop signs.
15. That place that shows us the mysteries of the universe.
16. That place that always smells bad on Sunday nights.
17. That one place you go on the weekends to drink away your worries.

The HORRORscopes

This week’s HORRORscopes are brought to you by Crippling Depress yums™. Delicious, moist, and with an apathetic after taste, see why everybody is talking about Crippling Depress-yums™. Crippling Depress-yums™: The only food that makes you ready for Rose! Free for a limited time.*

1. ARIES: Crippling Depress™. It was modern art.
2. TAURUS: Crippling Depress™. She’s on how to be a thrifty housewife. Walmart yums™.
3. GEMINI: Crippling Depress™. It was modern art.
4. CANCER: Crippling Depress™. New Art Installation on Campus
5. LEO: Crippling Depress™. They make a horrible couple.
6. SCORPIO: Crippling Depress™. We didn’t think it was aesthetically pleasing.
7. SAGITTARIUS: Crippling Depress™. It’s best to leave the box closed. Pretend that it’s been delivered by mistake.
8. AQUARIUS: Crippling Depress™. Scream, the time slots of your classes. Your professors will catch on soon enough.
9. PISCES: Crippling Depress™. They’ve got their Eye on you. So make sure to pass up in case the problem comes to blows. You know who they are. They’ve told you in a dream.
10. CAPRICORN: Crippling Depress™. Who’s got three arms, one leg, and a thirst for Rose Thorns.

11. FACT OF THE WEEK

It was modern art.
